The TU–GPHP offers small class sizes and opportunities to work with faculty who are conducting public health research and practice in diverse areas across the public health field. All students are immersed in the field via an integrative learning experience, in addition to any practicum or thesis. The MPH program requires 45 credits to graduate and is typically completed in 2 years. The application deadline is MARCH 1st for fall admission, however to receive full consideration for graduate scholarship funding, applicants are encouraged to submit their application by February 20.

Benefits of TU Education

Students will gain expertise in survey and community-based participatory research, program evaluation and planning, and help students become effective researchers that help improve community health. The TU—GPHP addresses emerging challenges of Health Policy & Law, One Health Strategies & Emergency Management, Social Determinants of Health, Epigenetics and Environmental Health, and Antibiotic Resistance and Infectious Disease.

Our program is uniquely positioned and aligned to the only Historically Black College and University in the USA with a prestigious veterinary training program. In addition to the MPH programs listed above, TU GPHP offers a dual PhD/MPH option, and will soon offer the DVM/MPH.

Admissions Requirements

Applicants must have completed the B.S degree from a department of approved standing and granted by an accredited college or university to be considered for the Master’s program in Public Health.

- Prerequisite academic work
- Applicants must also have a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or better.
- The minimum acceptable combined GRE score of 300 (new) or 1000 (old)
- Official Transcript from all colleges/universities attended
- Completed Application along with the required amount of application fees
- 3 Letters of Recommendation
- Statement of Purpose

For More Information

Please visit our website for additional information about our MPH program or contact our Graduate Director Crystal James, JD, MPH via email at CJames@Tuskegee.edu with any questions about the program.

URL: https://www.tuskegee.edu/Content/Uploads/Tuskegee/images/Graduate%20Studies/MPH%20Degree_finProgram.pdf